

Tenure-Track Position - Developmental Psychology

The Department of Psychology at the University of Haifa, Israel, invites applications for an open-rank tenure-track position in Developmental Psychology, beginning in the 2018 academic year. The academic rank will be matched to the candidate's qualifications. The screening of applications will continue until the position is filled.

Please send: (1) Curriculum Vitae, (2) 2-3 selected publications, (4) research statement (highlighting past work as well as your plans), (5) teaching statement, and (6) the names and email addresses of three references to: David Oppenheim, Ph.D., Chair of the Developmental Search Committee, Department of Psychology, University of Haifa: oppenhei@psy.haifa.ac.il

The successful candidate will demonstrate the potential to develop a strong research program, supervise graduate student research, and teach undergraduate and graduate courses. We are particularly interested in applicants with an interest in translating research findings to "real-world" application.

The Psychology Department at the University of Haifa is one of Israel's leading psychological science departments. The developmental track is intimately connected with the Center for the Study of Child Development (see link below). The Center includes a group of internationally leading senior researchers and approximately 30 post-doc and graduate students, who are devoted to the study of children's development, with a particular emphasis on their emotional health and well-being. <https://sites.hevra.haifa.ac.il/childdev/>

For further details regarding the Department of Psychology at the University of Haifa, please visit: <https://psy.hevra.haifa.ac.il/index.php/about?lang=he>